

Connie Jacobs is the Bureau of Land Management National Tourism and Underserved Communities Program Lead (Acting). She has worked in the tourism and interpretation field since her early college years when she arrived in Yellowstone National Park for a summer job. After providing tours to people from around the country and the world for over 10 seasons in Yellowstone, she worked with various conservation organizations and the US Forest Service before returning to the interpretation and education field. She was the first manager at two new interpretive centers (First People's Buffalo Jump, and the Upper Missouri River National Monument in Great Falls and Fort Benton, MT). She also managed the California National Historic Trail Interpretive Center in Elko, NV. In her current position she uses her knowledge of tourism, visitation, education, and interpretation while promoting safe and ethical experiences on America's Public Lands. In her free time, she enjoys spending time with her husband and menagerie of animals, gardening, and being outdoors throughout every season of the year.
